

Modal verbs for advice

Functions	Examples
We use SHOULD to give advice or to say we think something is good.	You shouldn't bite your nails. We should be using only solar and wind energy. The UNO should expel Russia from the Security Council.
We can use OUGHT TO instead of SHOULD .	You ought to put more attention when you are doing your homework. They ought to manufacture more solar panels in Europe. We oughtn't to buy any more gas from Russia.
We can use HAD BETTER for a more insistent advice or a warning , especially when there is danger or a serious problem.	You had better not touch that wire! We'd better do something to stop climate change.
We can also use MUST for insistent advice.	You mustn't worry about the money, it is more important to get some work experience. You really must stop smoking, it's going to kill you.

We can add HAVE after SHOULD and OUGHT TO to talk about a past action or situation, or to express regret about past actions.

We should have taken a taxi, the bus is taking forever to come!

The electricity companies should have invested more on renewable energies.

They ought to have stopped Putin when he invaded Georgia in 1992.

I'm getting soaked! We should have taken an umbrella.

I ought to have done my homework yesterday, I'm really busy today.
